

Soyoung Jeon
Department of Economics, Applied Statistics & International Business
New Mexico State University

Effects of food insecurity and social isolation on mortality in US adults

There has been growing interest in the health effects of food insecurity and social isolation as social determinants of health. This study used National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) data from 2005 to 2014 and National Death Index (NDI) Linked Mortality data to investigate the associations between food insecurity, social isolation, and mortality among American adults using Cox proportional hazards models.